9-11 Survivor Uses Glass Art, Containing Cremains, To Help Those Grieving

Columbus Ohio - Leatrice Guttentag moved from New Jersey to Ohio after September 11, 2001. On that day she had been working in her office, in the computer industry, on the 80th floor of the north tower. She escaped just minutes before the building collapsed. Her job was gone, but she reassessed her life and returned to her love of art.

Art was therapeutic and helped console her after losing many friends. Her dog Dozer, sensing her sadness, was a major comfort, providing Lee with unlimited love. After Dozer's passing Lee sought a way to save Dozer's cremains in a beautiful piece of glass art that would honor her beloved friend and so "Glass Remembrance" was born.

"I've always believed art therapy can be a great comfort for those in pain. The creation of beautiful glass art and jewelry is a way for people to keep their loved ones close to their heart".

Although we can no longer be with our loved ones we can capture their memories in custom, hand blown glass tributes, that contain a small portion of their cremains. In today's highly mobile society people can be separated from a loved one's resting place. Glass Remembrance <http://www.glassremembrance.com>, creates portable tributes that can always be part of your life.
